5 THINGS TO KNOW

WELCOME TO METRO PHILLY

JENNIFER LOGUE, FEATURES EDITOR

No one does Independence Day like Philadelphia — the city where it all began. Aside from the usual barbecue with family and friends, we put together a July 4 itinerary of fun and free things to do to really make the most of it. From seeing a 40-ton sand sculpture to enjoying a free day at the museum to taking in the beauty of one of the most dazzling fireworks displays in the world, you'll have more than enough to do on your day off from work.

1 TRUMP, LOPEZ OBRADOR DISCUSS IMMIGRATION

President Donald Trump and Mexico's next leader, Andres Manuel Lopez Obrador discussed immigration, trade and security issues in a phone call on Monday. Lopez Obrador, a 64-year-old former mayor of Mexico City, won a landslide election victory on Sunday, dealing a crushing blow to establishment parties and becoming the first leftist to win the Mexican presidency since one-party rule ended in 2000. Relations between Trump and Lopez Obrador will be closely watched because Trump has regularly criticized Mexico. In comments to reporters, Trump said he believed Lopez Obrador would help the United States secure its southern border. "I think the relationship would be a very good one. We'll see what happens, but I really do believe it's going to be a very good one," Trump said. He said that in the phone call, they had touched on a possible trade deal between the United States and Mexico. Shortly afterward, Lopez Obrador gave his account of the call in a Twitter post, saying he had proposed a comprehensive deal to create jobs, lower immigration and improve security.

2 DIRECTV TO HIKE PRICES AS CONTENT FEES RISE

AT&T Inc. said on Monday it is raising the price of its DirecTV Now streaming service by $5, the latest increase in the industry following a similar price hike by Dish Network Corp's Sling TV. Traditional cable and satellite TV companies are losing customers as viewers move to cheaper services like Netflix Inc. or Google's YouTube TV, but are raising prices for their online streaming packages as content costs continue to rise with growing production costs. DirecTV Now's cheapest package will increase by 14 percent to $40 per month, beginning July 26 for new customers, AT&T said, while the change will roll out to existing customers based on their billing date. Craig Moffett, an analyst with MoffettNathanson, said content costs are rising for streaming services similar to traditional TV, likely in the high single-digits on a percentage basis every year. Moffett estimated that content costs have risen 10 percent for DirecTV Now since it launched in November 2016. "The question is whether customers will stick with [DirecTV Now] or will they react with the same kind of frustration they had with rising cable and satellite bills," Moffett said.

4 TRUMP LAWYER COHEN VOWS TO DEFEND HIMSELF

President Donald Trump's longtime personal lawyer Michael Cohen vowed to defend himself and protect his family and country first if Trump or the president's legal team tried to discredit him, ABC News reported on Monday. Cohen, in an interview with ABC, indicated he would be cooperative with prosecutors investigating his business dealings and probes into Russian meddling in the 2016 U.S. election. "I will not be a punching bag as part of anyone's defense strategy," ABC quoted Cohen as saying in the interview on Saturday and published on Monday. "I am not a villain of this story and I will not allow others to try to depict me that way." Cohen, who has not been charged with any crimes, and his lawyer Guy Petrillo did not respond to requests from Reuters for comment. The White House did not immediately respond to a Reuters request for comment on Cohen's remarks. Cohen has expressed worries about the financial burden of his legal defense and complained that he has not received enough support from Trump, according to a friend who spoke with Cohen last month and reported it to Reuters anonymously.

5 3-YEAR-OLD DIES AFTER BIRTHDAY PARTY STABBING

A 3-year-old girl who was among nine people stabbed by a man who went on a rampage at the toddler's birthday party on Saturday evening in Boise, Idaho, has died of her injuries, authorities said on Monday. "It is with deep sorrow that we share the news that she has passed away today," Boise police said in a statement about the girl, who had been flown to Utah for medical treatment. The child's name was not released. The toddler was one of six children stabbed in the attack, which took place at an apartment complex that is home to many refugees. The victims included people from Syria, Iraq and Ethiopia. The 30-year-old man arrested in the attack, Timmy Kinner, is being held without bail at the Ada County jail in Boise. Police said the charges against Kinner would be amended to reflect the toddler's death. Police provided no details of what new charges Kinner would face. Kinner, who is from Los Angeles, currently faces six charges of injury to a child and nine charges of aggravated battery. The nine victims included three adults who were wounded when they tried to stop the assault, police said.

Junior soccer team found alive in Thai cave after nine days

Rescuers still must get all 13 out of the "labyrinth-like" cave.

Twelve boys and their assistant soccer coach have been found alive by rescuers inside a Thai cave complex nine days after they went missing, Chiang Rai province's governor said on Monday.

The boys, aged between 11 and 16, went missing with the 25-year-old after soccer practice on June 23 after they set out to explore the Tham Luang cave complex in a forest park near by the border with Myanmar.

A massive international rescue effort has been underway since, with rescue teams battling through thick mud and high water to try to reach the group in the cave network that stretches 6 miles into a mountain.

"Thai Navy SEALs have found all 13 with signs of life," Gov. Narongsak Osottanakorn told reporters who have been following the increasingly desperate search that has gripped the country.

"Thai Navy SEALs have found all 13 with signs of life."
Gov. Narongsak Osottanakorn

Relatives of the boys, who have been at a shelter near the cave hoping for a breakthrough, were seen cheering, smiling and receiving calls after being given the news. Rescuers shook hands and congratulated each other as occasional cheers broke out.

It remains unclear whether any of the group were injured or in need of medical attention, but they have been given energy gels to sustain them while a plan is worked out to bring them to safety.

As the days wore on with the group missing, distraught family members had placed fruit, desserts, sugary drinks and sweets on mats near the cave as an offering to the spirits which some people believe protect the cave and the forest.

Rescuers had been working on Monday to clear a constricted passageway for divers deep inside the flooded complex in a search operation that has been hampered by heavy rain.

Divers from Thailand's elite navy SEAL unit had been focusing on an elevated mound inside the cave which cavers have named Pattaya Beach, which could have provided the boys with a refuge when rains flooded the cave.

"The SEALs reported that ... they reached Pattaya Beach, which was flooded. So they went 400 meters further where we found the 13 ... who were safe," Narongsak told the cheering group of reporters.

Capt. Jessica Tait from the U.S. Air Force's rescue support team said there were "lots of challenges" throughout the search but that the effort had brought the country together.

"When you consider it there were lots of challenges when it comes to the elements, when it comes to different courses of actions," Tait told reporters.

"But you know what I saw? I saw Thailand coming together," she added.

The next challenge will be getting the group out of the cave, which some have dubbed a "labyrinth."

Rescuers had discussed waiting until water levels subsided to get the boys out. Other options included teaching the group to use diving gear to navigate the flooded cave.

Medical teams were seen preparing first aid kits after news of the group's discovery broke outside the cave's entrance.

Narongsak said medical teams had been sent inside the cave and it would take them around four hours to assess the group's health and how fit they are before coming up with a strategy to get them out.

The boys have been provided with energy gel to eat, the Thai navy SEAL unit said on its official Facebook page.

"Power gel and sustenance equipment has been brought ... to the team ... and we've sent people to keep them company until the transport plan can begin," it said.

Demetrius Pitts is accused of plotting attacks at July Fourth celebrations in Philly, Cleveland. FRANKLIN COUNTY SHERIFF'S OFFICE

Man who plotted Labor Day attack in Philly arrested: FBI

"We gonna hit the Bicentennial City — Philadelphia. Now, that will really open their eyes," the suspect allegedly told an undercover agent.

The FBI has arrested a man who allegedly planned to bomb Fourth of July and Labor Day celebrations in Cleveland and Philadelphia and then stand by and watch "it go off," federal officials said on Monday.

Demetrius Pitts, 48, of Ohio, who had expressed allegiance to the al Qaeda militant group, was arrested on Sunday after a meeting with an undercover FBI agent where he said he planned to plant a bomb at a Cleveland parade celebrating the U.S. Independence Day holiday and intended to target Philadelphia next. Pitts had reportedly planned to detonate a truck's worth of explosives in Philly this coming Labor Day, according to court filings obtained by Philly.com.

"We gonna hit the Bicentennial City — Philadelphia," he told the undercover agent, according to the filings. "Now, that will really open their eyes."

"I'm gonna be downtown when the — when the thing go off. I'm gonna be somewhere cuz I wanna see it go off," Pitts told an undercover FBI agent who he believed was affiliated with al Qaeda, the bureau said in court documents.

Pitts also suggested giving the children of military personnel remote control cars packed with explosives during the parade so the kids would unwittingly detonate the bombs, according to the FBI.

Pitts was charged with attempting to provide material support to a designated foreign terrorist organization. He faces up to 20 years in prison if convicted.

An FBI source gave Pitts a bus pass and a phone to conduct surveillance ahead of his planned attack, prosecutors said.

Pitts, who lives in the Cleveland suburb of Maple Heights, also discussed possibly traveling to San Francisco for reconnaissance for al Qaeda, the FBI said.

It was not immediately clear if he had retained a lawyer, and relatives could not be reached for comment.

"This defendant, by his own words and by his own deeds, wanted to attack our nation and its ideals."

U.S. Attorney Justin Herdman

"This defendant, by his own words and by his own deeds, wanted to attack our nation and its ideals," said Justin Herdman, the U.S. attorney for northern Ohio.

Officials said Pitts is an American citizen who had been radicalized in the United States.

In 2015, U.S. law enforcement officials said they had arrested more than 10 people inspired by the Islamic State militant group ahead of the Fourth of July holiday, saying the arrests had disrupted planned attacks.

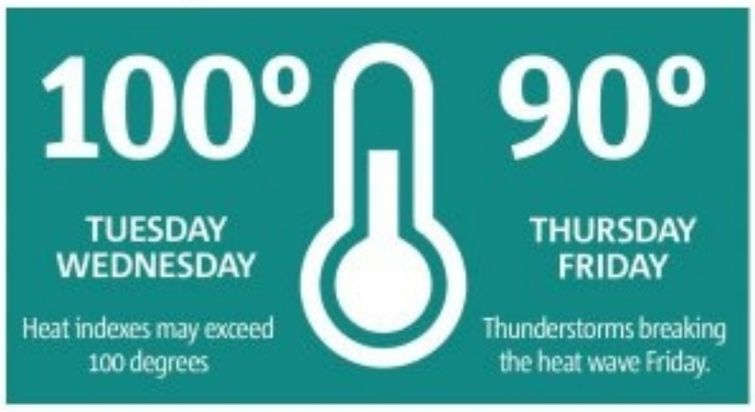
Philly heat wave rages on through July 4 week

Eduardo Velev cools off with a fire hydrant on Sunday in Philadelphia. An excessive heat warning has been issued in Philadelphia and along the East Coast as hot and humid weather has hit the region and will remain for several more days. GETTY IMAGES



The first major heat wave of the 2018 summer season is not backing down just yet, with a heat index of up to 105 degrees in Southeastern Pennsylvania prompting an "excessive heat warning" on Monday.

Philly started really sweltering on Friday, with temperatures reaching the high 90s through Sunday. Now meteorologists with the National Weather Service (NWS) are saying an extended period of "dangerously hot weather" will continue through midweek "with the potential for heat-related illness ... especially the elderly and those in poor health."

The highest heat index values will occur from late morning into the early evening, according to the NWS. Heat indexes may exceed 100 degrees on Tuesday and Wednesday. Temperatures will remain in the 90s through Thursday, with thunderstorms breaking the heat wave Friday. Finally, temperatures will drop into the 80s on Saturday and Sunday.

As a result of this week's excess heat, experts are recommending people take extra precautions and look out for one another.

Meteorologists recommend people who spend time outside reschedule strenuous activities to the early morning or evening, and know the signs of heat exhaustion and heat stroke. People are strongly encouraged to stay hydrated at all times. MORGAN ROUSSEAU

HOW TO AVOID HEAT STROKE

- Know the signs of heat-related illnesses, which include headache, light-headedness, muscle cramps, nausea or vomiting. Call 911 if you or someone else shows any signs.
- Stay hydrated — even if you don't feel thirsty. And be sure to keep your pets hydrated on their walks too.
- Stay out of the sun if possible, but if you have to be outside, be sure to wear at least SPF 15 and a hat for protection and dress in lightweight, light-colored, loose clothing.
- Avoid strenuous activity, especially during the peak sun hours between 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.
- If you don't have an air conditioner, consider going to one of the city's public pools or air-conditioned areas like libraries, movie theaters or one of the city's many cooling centers — you can find your nearest cooling center via 311.

N.A. Poe rolls up a (sandwich) joint

The famed Philly weed activist starts cooking up munchies with his eponymous Fishtown eatery.

letters@metro.us

"I'm marketing it to the munchies demographic, but we're for anyone who wants a classic Philly sandwich. If you catch the double entendre, all the better."

Local weed activist and pot patron saint N.A. Poe

Two and a half months after being sentenced to four years' probation and 100 hours of community service for a 2017 felony pot bust during one of his famed "Philly Smoke Sessions" marijuana markets, local weed activist and pot patron saint N.A. Poe is surprisingly and refreshingly upbeat about turning a new leaf.

"After playing Poe for six years only to become restaurateur is weird," he said, laughing, as he's poring through schematics and planning this week's groundbreaking for his next project: Poe's Sandwich Joint. "It's almost honorable."

It is here that I remind the comedian-turned-Occupy-City-Hall-protester-turned-marijuana-major-domo-born Richard Tamaccio Jr., about John Huston's quote from the film, "Chinatown": "Politicians, ugly buildings and whores all get respectable if they last long enough."

And Poe's Sandwich Joint at Marlborough Street and Frankford Avenue in Fishtown, mere blocks from that neighborhood's medical-marijuana dispensary, the likes of which he fought for (and is not part of, as he doesn't have millions of dollars and pharmaceutical rep backing) is respectable. "I get people asking me all the time if I'm going to slip some weed into the food," he said. "No way. This is neither the time nor place for that."

Once upon a time, it was weed and weed alone that was on his mind. Poe and his minions (such as Marc Lawlor, a chef at Loews Hotel who is now Poe's partner in this sandwich spot) fought to legalize pot in every which way, medicinally and recreationally. He even dreamed of opening a marijuana dispensary in Philly. Instead, it was during one of the earliest Philly Smoke Sessions that he met Lawler, and began embracing another goal.

"We actually put an idea for a restaurant in motion back then, so that when all this went down, I would have something to pivot onto," he said. What "went down," in part, was his and his girlfriend, Rachel Friedman's April 2017 arrest in Frankford (and having their house in South Philly majorly raided) for possession with intent to deliver; conspiracy; causing or risking catastrophe; possession of a controlled substance; use or possession of drug paraphernalia; possession of an instrument of crime; and recklessly endangering another person. The other thing that "went down" was how Pennsylvania adapted itself to a new gig: the high-ticket medical marijuana dispensary business.

"We built the train tracks for legalization, and basically the train ran us over," he said. "If I was smart and I was to evolve then, I had to get out. I mean, it was a hostile corporate takeover. The thing that we loved was taken from us. They hit me with a SWAT team, and two months later, there's guys in golf shirts selling weed in dispensaries."

Poe is quick to add that his Smoke Sessions and various parties throughout the city were providing medical marijuana to the afflicted (most particularly, war veterans) long before the "Lindsay Snyder crowd put all their venture capital money together."

With a sixth sense that he and his ilk would be pushed to the wayside by corporate ganja, Poe recalled having countless gigs in local restaurants when he was given an opportunity to snag a spot (courtesy his neighbor Pete McAndrews of Heffe Tacos fame) in the new Fishtown. "We would go to weed dinners in that neighborhood years ago, get done, and wonder what the hell else could we eat," Poe said. "Plus, that neighborhood is so gentrified, it could use some down-and-dirty Philly food flair with my own particular twists."

Poe's Sandwich Joint will be a morning-noon-and-night proposition, with 8 a.m. opening "walk of shame" egg-bacon-and cheese munchables on Sarcone's rolls, to his grandmother's meatballs and sausage-and-peppers for lunch, to $3 burger boxes reminiscent of Nifty Fiftys.

"We're not doing $12 gastropub burgers," said Poe. "Just flip-em-out-the-window burgers on a buttered, toasted roll." On weekends, PSJ will be open until 3 a.m., and on Sundays, will serve unfancy brunch. "I'm marketing it to the munchies demographic, but we're for anyone who wants a classic Philly sandwich. If you catch the double entendre, all the better."

Going through the bureaucratic nightmare without catching red flag flack from any Philly government agency and keeping it close to his vest without blabbing to friends and press ('You never know who is plotting to take you out"), Poe is looking forward to a late summer opening and a ground-breaking ground event this week (hit his Instagram for updates @poessandwichjoint) for his personal sandwich menu.

"I started this project like I do every other: in a black composition notebook, then suddenly it's a logo, then a restaurant. Is this the ultimate dream? I don't know. I can still run my backpack drive every August and the Christmas presents we do [in partnership with "Tuffy's Fight"]. I also need to do this for myself to legitimize myself as a person and go beyond the notoriety I have. And that's a gift."

RUSSIA'S 'MUSTACHE OF HOPE' LEADS THE WORLD CUP HOSTS TO THE NEXT ROUND

TURN TO PAGE 18 FOR MORE CUP COVERAGE.

Analysis

DMITRY BELYAEV

Metro World Cup correspondent in Moscow

Coach Stanislav Cherchesov's facial hair is the good luck charm that's helped Russia reach the World Cup quarterfinals.

At the stadium and in front of the screens, all of Russia was standing on its feet and holding their breath when striker Iago Aspas was preparing to make the fifth penalty attempt for Spain. And that is not the only thing they were holding. Some had a fake or genuine mustache in their hands for good luck. And it worked, as Igor Akinfeev somehow denied the kick with his left boot, ensuring his team's advancement in the World Cup quarterfinals.

The media is already calling it the "biggest shock of the 2018 World Cup" — Russia beating 2010 winners Spain — made the country forget that the next day is Monday. #HOMEALONe went to the streets of Moscow to feel the spirit of victory of the biggest soccer game ever for the country. Soccer lovers from the host country were praising the team's great performance, chanting for the goalkeeper, singing the national anthem and dancing. But apart from Akinfeev, who is already considered a hero, local fans believe what helped the squad was — Stanislav Cherchesov's mustache.

The manager's facial hair has become an unlikely source of inspiration after TV talk-show host Ivan Urgant encouraged fans to back the team by sporting mustaches ahead of the tournament.

"Cherchesov needs your support now," the TV host, who launched the campaign, said on Instagram when the World Cup was about to kick off. "Everything is against him: the forecasts, weather, the laws of physics, the anatomy of some football players and simple logic as well. We call upon everyone to grow a mustache and post your photos under the hashtag 'mustache of hope.'"

Russia's soccer coach Stanislav Cherchesov's mustache has become a good-luck phenomenon in Russia. GETTY IMAGES

And that is why some of the fans were holding their facial hair they grew or bought during the most breathtaking moment of the Cup.

Russia appeared to be no-hopers by most observers when the tournament began in June. Even getting out of their group had been seen as beyond their capabilities.

Prior to their game against Spain many were pessimistic about the result; however, they've now witnessed their national team's first trip to the World Cup quarterfinals since Mexico 1970.

Thus after the great triumph, the Cherchesov-style mustache has become a true symbol of hope. And even nonbelievers now have nothing to say, as facial hair is directing the national team of Russia against Croatia. And as fans told #HOMEALONe, the victory would be difficult but no longer impossible.

THE FOREMAN FORECAST: MORE INDEPENDENT THAN EVER

ANALYSIS

TOM FOREMAN

CNN's Tom Foreman is the author of the book "My Year of Running Dangerously."

Are you proud to be an American? When I was a child, this would have been largely a rhetorical question. Of course, we were proud.

Living in the backwash of the 1950s, which was itself the backwash of World War II, we wallowed in a deep sense that the United States had defended the world from bitter despotism. The American Dream was the reward: a house, a picket fence, 2.5 kids, a dog in the yard and a DeSoto in the garage. What was there not to like? I mean, as long as you weren't female, black, gay, or, well … you get the point.

But these are different days. After decades of boom and bust, we've watched the gap between the haves and have-nots widen into a chasm. Debates rage about race, justice, law enforcement, education, drug rights, religion, sexual identity, freedom, and opportunity.

So perhaps it is no surprise, that a new poll released by Gallup this week shows fewer people saying they are proud to be American; less than three-quarters in fact, which is some six points lower than it was a couple of years ago.

Our recent forays into foreign wars and our treatment of minorities seem to rank pretty far up as primary reasons for folks going negative on the issue. I imagine the Trump effect is playing a role too, although he's not the country — he's just the president.

But I suspect the deepest, unsaid reason is simply that many of us are conflicted over what it means to be patriotic now. If you support the idea of America, does that mean you support the administration? Does it mean you are falling in line with current policies on everything from gun rights to immigration? If you say you are patriotic, does that mean you are pledging allegiance to the crippled two-party system?

In short, when someone asks if you are patriotic, you may hear: "Do I believe in the direction the country is going?" or "Do I believe in the ideals upon which the country is built?" And which question you hear, makes all the difference.

Weinstein charged with assaulting third woman, may face life in prison

The Manhattan district attorney on Monday announced new criminal charges against film producer Harvey Weinstein, accusing him of sexually assaulting a third woman in addition to the two mentioned in earlier charges.

The new indictment accuses Weinstein of forcibly performing oral sex on a woman in July 2006. The new charges, which include predatory sexual assault, carry a sentence of 10 years to life in prison, according to the office of District Attorney Cyrus Vance.

Weinstein, 66, once one of Hollywood's most powerful filmmakers, has pleaded not guilty to the first set of charges and has denied ever having non-consensual sex. His lawyer, Benjamin Brafman, could not be reached immediately for comment on Monday.

Vance issued a statement about the new charges saying, "This indictment is the result of the extraordinary courage exhibited by the survivors who have come forward. Our investigation continues."

More than 70 women — mostly young actresses and women in other aspects of the movie business — have accused the Miramax film studio's co-founder of sexual misconduct, including rape, in a series of incidents dating back decades. The accusations gave rise to the #MeToo movement, which has seen hundreds of women publicly accusing powerful men in business, government and entertainment of sexual harassment and abuse.

"This indictment is the result of the extraordinary courage exhibited by the survivors who have come forward."

The Office of District Attorney Cyrus Vance

Weinstein has been free on a $1 million bail after surrendering in May to face the first set of charges, which came after a months long investigation by the New York Police Department. Prosecutors have not named any of the women accusing Weinstein of sexual assault in court papers.

The details of one of the cases in the earlier charges align with the account of Lucia Evans, a former aspiring actress who told the New Yorker in October 2017 that Weinstein forced her to perform oral sex on him in 2004. The earlier indictment also accused him of raping a different woman in March 2013.

As the accusations against him came out, the Weinstein Co.'s board fired him, the company filed for bankruptcy in March, and the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences expelled Weinstein.

In years past, the academy had showered him with Oscars for a string of films that helped define independent cinema in the 1990s. Miramax and later the Weinstein Co put out acclaimed movies such as "Shakespeare in Love," "Pulp Fiction," "Sex, Lies and Videotape," "The Crying Game" and "The King's Speech."

London's Metropolitan Police and Los Angeles prosecutors have said they are reviewing accusations of sexual assault against Weinstein.

Port of Philly drug bust leads to seizure of $1.7 million worth of fentanyl

U.S. Customs and Border Protection officers seized 110 pounds of the deadly opioid fentanyl with an estimated $1.7 million street value.

$34K

The fentanyl weighed a combined 50 kilograms, or 110 pounds. High purity fentanyl such as this can sell for over $34,000 per kilogram on the street, the CBP agency said.

U.S. Customs and Border Protection found the fentanyl shipment during a routine examination of the Port of Philadelphia. U.S. CUSTOMS AND BORDER PROTECTION

Drug-sniffing U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) agency dogs recently discovered 110 pounds of the highly addictive and notoriously deadly opioid, fentanyl, officers said.

The fentanyl, which has an estimated street value of $1.7 million, was discovered last week during a routine exam of the Port of Philadelphia, according to a CBP announcement.

Narcotics detector dogs reportedly sniffed them out in a shipment of iron oxide that originated in China.

The fentanyl weighed a combined 50 kilograms, or 110 pounds. High purity fentanyl such as this can sell for more than $34,000 per kilogram on the street, the agency said.

"Opioids, including fentanyl and its analogues, are a serious public health concern, and the importation of vast amounts of this deadly synthetic chemical compound is a national security threat. CBP remains committed to keeping our communities safe by combatting the flow of illicit drugs, including synthetic opioids, into the United States," said Casey Durst, CBP Director of Field Operations in Baltimore.

WHAT IS FENTANYL?

Fentanyl is a potent synthetic opioid approved by the Food and Drug Administration for use as a pain reliever and anesthetic. It is roughly 100 times more potent than morphine and 50 times more potent than heroin as a pain killer, according to the U.S. Customs and Border Protection agency. Fentanyl was first developed in 1959 and introduced in the 1960s as an intravenous anesthetic. It is legally manufactured and distributed in the United States but the drug is frequently abused via theft, fraudulent prescriptions and illicit distribution The U.S. saw a marked increase of overdoses due to fentanyl abuse in 2005, and has since declared its over use as a main culprit in the national opioid epidemic.

the GRUMBLE

Hello Grumblers! We're taking off for the Fourth, but we have a couple great reader write-ins today that will surely hold you over until Thursday. Enjoy your BBQs and don't feel bad about nudging your way through the crowded masses to get the best view of the fireworks this year!

READER WRITE-INS:

FARTING!
Farting on the bus next to me makes me so mad. I feel like I'm eating someone's butt!! It goes in my mouth and it disgusts me!!! Please hold your farts I don't care if you burst open. I hate farts.
- Kalea Mckoy, Metro Philly reader

OBEY THE BIKE LAWS!
I'm reaching out to grumble about all the bike riders who DO NOT obey the traffic laws! With all the bike lanes around the city to accommodate bike riders, you would think they would show their appreciation by following the laws. As a driver if I run a red light, they have cameras & cops to ticket me &/or add points to my license. This causes you to pay more fines if you're a repeat offender & your insurance (which is already one of the highest in the country) to increase. Why? Because I can seriously injure or kill a pedestrian while breaking the traffic laws. What is being done about these bike riders who carelessly run through the red light & put pedestrians at risk? They can also seriously injure someone or kill someone's child with enough impact. I'm currently 7 months pregnant & they really pretend that they don't see people crossing the street. Some even get attitudes as if they have the right away, ughhhhhhhh. There are some that do follow the law, and then you'll see the rogue riders pedaling right pass them at the light as if it doesn't apply to them. Police need to start ticketing them more and I'm sure it'll reduce this bad behavior.
- Q, Metro reader from Brooklyn

Aries Get involved in fun events or sign up for a physical challenge. Participation will enhance your life and lead to personal growth. Romance is favored.

Taurus Don't leap before you look. Test the waters and find out what works for you before you venture in too deep. Back away from an argumentative situation.

Gemini Taking short trips, engaging in lively discussions and contemplating what's available to you will help you find the right path. Don't act in haste; time is on your side.

Cancer Aim high and trust in your ability to bring about positive change. Let your uniqueness shine through in all that you do.

Leo Your desire for change will lead you down a slippery slope. Don't jump into something before you know what's entailed and how much it will cost. Choose to be cautious.

Virgo Your creative imagination will be in overdrive. If you harness your ideas and give them a realistic spin, you will develop a quite profitable plan.

Libra Keep moving forward. If you lag or stop along the way, you will miss your mark. Look, see and do, and don't stop until you reach your destination. Romance will brighten your day.

Scorpio Pour your heart and soul into something you love doing. Don't let what others do or say drag you down. It's up to you to put your plans in motion.

Sagittarius Trust in yourself. Don't let someone take advantage of you or use emotional tactics to persuade you to get involved in something that doesn't benefit you directly. Personal improvements are highlighted.

Capricorn A change will do you good. Rearrange your furniture or alter your routine to add to your convenience or to fit in something you want to pursue.

Aquarius Do what suits you and refrain from following someone who tends to be extravagant or indulgent. Personal or spiritual growth will give you a new perspective on life, love and happiness.

Pisces Express your ideas and listen to the feedback you get from someone you trust. Your ideas may be unique, but they must be practical as well if you want to be successful. EUGENIA LAST

Philadelphia is the place to be for America's birthday. R. MYERS FOR VISIT PHILADELPHIA

Your guide to July 4 in Philadelphia

Celebrate America's birthday in the place where it all started.

Stop by the Shops at Liberty Place to see a 40-ton sand sculpture that commemorates Parkway 100. ALBERT LEE, OFFICE OF THE CITY REPRESENTATIVE

The United States turns 242 this year, and there's no better place to be than Philadelphia, our country's birthplace.

While firing up the BBQ and staying home with family and friends is certainly an option, you can take advantage of the many free activities all over the city.

Here are our top picks on things to do in Philadelphia on July 4.

Sand Sculpture Spectacular
9:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. The Shops at Liberty Place, 1625 Chestnut St.
Start off your July 4 by making a stop at the Sand Sculpture Spectacular at The Shops at Liberty Place. World-renowned sculptors have created a 40-ton sand sculpture to commemorate Parkway 100, which celebrates 100 years of the Benjamin Franklin Parkway. Hungry? Stop by SoBol Philly (46 S. 17th St.) for healthy breakfast options like acai bowls, smoothies and, of course, coffee!

Celebration of Freedom Ceremony
10 a.m. to 11 a.m. Independence Hall 520 Chestnut St.
Head down to the historic district for the Celebration of Freedom Ceremony, which will feature Mayor Jim Kenney, City Representative Sheila Hess (who will also emcee), the Philly Pops Big Band and more. The theme for this year is "Welcoming the World With Love: Drafting the Future" and will highlight community service achievements in Philadelphia, with the presentation of the Wawa Foundation Hero Award and the Third Annual Magis Award.

Free Museum Day
10 a.m. to 5 p.m. National Museum of American Jewish History 101 South Independence Mall East
A few steps away from Independence Hall is the National Museum of American Jewish History, and July 4, visits are free. There will be talks, Independence Day-themed art projects (like painting your own flag) and plenty to see in the museum's collection, including their special exhibit on composer Leonard Bernstein. Taking in so much information is sure to make you hungry. Luckily Red Owl Tavern is only a block away and has a menu to satisfy both parents and kids, alike. (Pro tip: If you get the Red Owl Tavern Burger, take it over the top by adding a fried egg.)

7th Annual Birthday Party at Independence
Visitor Center Independence Visitor Center 599 Market St. 1 p.m. to 2 p.m.
Who doesn't sweet treats on their birthday? At Independence Visitor Center, a five-tier cake will be on display along with 2,500 cupcakes in the shape of an American flag beginning at 9 a.m. Once the cake is finished being decorated at 1 p.m., Betsy Ross will sing "Happy Birthday" with the crowd. After that, everyone gets to eat free

The National Museum of Jewish American History will be free for visitors on July 4. M. KENNEDY cake and cupcakes, thanks to Termini Bros. It is first-come, first-served, however.

Party on the Parkway
12 p.m. to 10 p.m. Benjamin Franklin Parkway
If you didn't fill up on cupcakes before heading over to the free Party on the Parkway, that's OK — there will be a ton of food trucks on site, like The Cow and The Curd, Mama's Meatballs, Nick's Roast Beef, Bassett's Ice Cream and Empanada Guy. There will also be live music from up-and-coming Philly artists on the Chill Moody stage like Foxtrot and the Get Down, Shawn Smith, Hard Work Movement and more. The Claymobile will also be at The Kids Zone section of Party on the Parkway, giving free lessons to kids on ceramics and even Claymation.

Betsy Ross will be leading the crowd in singing "Happy Birthday" to America, which will also involve free cake and cupcakes. M. KENNEDY

July 4 Concert and Fireworks
7 p.m. to 10 p.m. 2451 Benjamin Franklin Parkway
If you're already at Party on the Parkway, stay put for the spectacular fireworks display and free concert. Grammy-winning artist Pitbull is headlining this year and will be joined by Broadway star Heather Headley and The Philly Pops Big Band.

Where to watch the July 4 fireworks

You have plenty of options.

JENNIFER LOGUE
jennifer.logue@metro.us

As the birthplace of the nation, Philadelphia is the place to be for July 4 festivities. One of the day's highlights is undoubtedly the gigantic fireworks display that caps off the annual Wawa Welcome America celebration. The party in the sky begins at 9:30 p.m. and the fireworks can be seen above the Philadelphia Museum of Art. But where are the best places to watch the July 4 fireworks? Here are our top picks.

You can also take a stroll along the Schuylkill Banks Boardwalk to see the fireworks. M. EDLOW FOR VISIT PHILADELPHIA

Benjamin Franklin Parkway
This is a no brainer, but the Benjamin Franklin Parkway is the ultimate spot to watch the July 4 fireworks in Philly. The whole street will be closed off from Logan Circle to Eakins Oval. If you want somewhere to sit that's off the beaten path, try your luck at getting a spot in the baseball field at 22nd St.

Belmont Plateau
Located at 1800 Belmont Mansion Drive, this slightly elevated part of Fairmount Park is perfect for spreading out blankets and taking in the fireworks, albeit at a distance. Should you have a picnic time under the bright lights? For sure.

Schuylkill Banks Boardwalk
Beginning at Locust Street and continuing to the South Street Bridge, the Schuylkill Banks Boardwalk extends the Schuylkill River Trail into the river, and the views are spectacular. If it's not too crowded, you can even leisurely stroll the boardwalk and burn off some of those BBQ calories while you're at it.

Assembly Rooftop Lounge
Located right on the Parkway on the top floor of the Logan Hotel, Assembly Rooftop Lounge is perfect for watching the fireworks with a cocktail in hand. The space is limited on busy nights, however, so it's not ideal if you're looking to spread out and relax.

Sister Cities Park
Located at 210 N. 18th St., this little patch of greenery is a great place to sit by a cool fountain and watch the fireworks on Fourth of July. Finding a bench may be tricky though with all the crowds, so be sure to bring a blanket to sit on.

Martin Luther King Jr. Drive
If you're coming in from the suburbs, Martin Luther King Jr. Drive is the perfect place to stop and take in the fireworks. You'll get views of the city skyline, the Art Museum and Boathouse row in addition to the fireworks. With so many beautiful sights to capture in a photo, this is a great place to go if you're looking for an epic Instagram shot on July 4.

Jayson Werth has been getting no love in Philly . GETTY IMAGES

IT'S TIME TO LIGHTEN UP ON WERTH

OPINION

GLEN MACNOW

Glen Macnow has been an outspoken voice in Philly sports for nearly three decades.
@realglenmacnow

Now that he's done, can we lighten up on Jayson Werth?

The first time Pat Burrell returned to Citizens Bank Park as an ex-Phillie in 2009, he received a standing ovation and a scoreboard tribute.

The same thing happened to Shane Victorino in 2014. We even rose and cheered for backup catcher Chris Coste when he wrapped it up as a Houston Astro in 2009.

But Jayson Werth?

"Boooooooo!"

For complicated reasons – some understandable, most largely petty – Jayson Werth became an enemy of the state when he left the Phils in 2011. Other than pitcher Adam Eaton, who got heckled when he dared show up at the ring ceremony, no member of the 2008 championship team became as unpopular here as the shaggy right fielder.

Werth retired from baseball last week at age 39. He had toiled in AAA, hoping to get back to the Majors with the Seattle Mariners. Like all athletes, he finally lost the battle with Father Time.

But he gave it a hell of a struggle. Werth lasted 15 years in the big leagues. He was never a superstar, but received MVP votes four separate times, including twice with the Phils. In eight seasons, including all four here, he had an OPS over .825 – excellent by any measure.

During his Phillies career, Chase Utley, Jimmy Rollins, and Ryan Howard overshadowed Werth in both performance and popularity. But during the three seasons he started (2008-10), he averaged 29 HR, 92 runs, 89 RBI, and 18 steals.

His .444 batting average in the 2008 World Series topped everyone. Most notably, his 11 postseason homers are a franchise record.

And then, in 2011, the Phils let Werth walk when division rival Washington seduced him with a seven-year, $126 million offer. This franchise already had more than its share of budget-clogging contracts, and super-prospect Dom Brown was poised to take the job. What could go wrong?

Well, everything went wrong. And Phillies fans took Werth's departure as a personal affront after he scoffed at the idea of offering a hometown discount by saying, "This isn't my hometown."

So we booed when he returned as a visiting player. Then he made inflammatory remarks.

The next season some Phils fans down at Nationals Park cheered when Werth broke his wrist diving for a ball. Understandably angry, he said, "I am motivated to get back quickly and see to it personally those people never walk down Broad Street in celebration again."

Even as a Phillie, Werth was never as cuddly as, say, Chooch Ruiz, with fans or media. So as a member of a division rival, he became a target – and he embraced playing the villain. He wound up hitting 22 homers against the Phils, more than he hit against any other team.

Then last September, in what he knew might be his final at-bat at Citizens Bank Park, Werth tipped his hat to the sparse crowd. Some cheered, more booed.

I don't want that to be the ending. Next month, the franchise will honor the 2008 team on alumni weekend. I expect most of our now-graying heroes to be on hand. They'll wave; we'll go wild, and the ballpark will experience the most energy it has seen since the New York Yankees came through.

Jayson Werth's calendar has an opening now. I hope he shows up. And I hope, even more, that everyone lets silly grudges go and he gets – seven years later – the ovation he deserves.

Monday at the 2018 FIFA World Cup

MEXICO OUT AT ROUND OF 16 AGAIN, LOSE TO BRAZIL

For the seventh-straight World Cup, Mexico has been eliminated in the Round of 16 after a 2-0 defeat at the hands of Brazil. Mexico last made the quarterfinals in 1986.

Neymar opened the scoring for the South American powerhouse, directing in a cross from Willian before Roberto Firmino polished off the pushing El Tri in the final moments to move on to the quarterfinals.

It was a match dominated by the five-time winners, who should have had a more decisive victory on the scoreboard.

But the heroics of Mexican goalkeeper Memo Ochoa ensured that El Tri would at least keep the score line respectable on Monday morning.

Brazil unleashed 21 attempts compared to Mexico's 13, with 10 hitting the target.

Yet Mexico actually saw more of the ball, but was unable to generate too many chances that provided a serious threat to the Brazilian goal.

BELGIUM ROARS BACK TO SHOCK JAPAN

Nacer Chadli's 94th-minute winner lifted Belgium to a remarkable 3-2 comeback victory over Japan, overturning a 2-0 second-half deficit and clinching what will be an instant classic at the World Cup.

Japan scored its first unlikely tally in the 48th minute through Genki Haraguchi, who placed a perfect low shot past Thibaut Courtois from the right side of the box.

Just moments later, the Blue Samurai doubled its lead thanks to a brilliant strike by Takashi Inui, whose shot from 20 yards out was straight as an arrow before nestling into the bottom-right corner of the Belgian goal.

With the third-ranked team in the world's backs against the wall, Jan Vertonghen pulled one back for Belgium in the 69th minute with a looping header near the left touchline before Marouane Fellaini drew things level in the 74th minute.
